

Lin Yang (杨林)

Hefner Fellow: Kennedy School of Government, Harvard. Mason Program 2006/2007

Lin Yang is presently the Assistant Director at the Center for US-China Relations, Asia Society in New York. She has worked for CNN America Bureau and was a News Anchor with China Central Television (CCTV) from 2002-2006, where she conducted many live broadcasts including the 2003 Iraq war, the breakdown of the Columbia spacecraft, the launch of China's first manned spacecraft, the first round of six party talks, etc. She also interviewed many high level global political and business leaders.

Prior to this, Yang worked with the World Bank China Market Place, and served at different levels at the Development and Reform Commission in Hubei Province, managing world bank loan water conservancy projects on the Yangtze river, leading poverty alleviation projects in West China and building E-Government Information system.

Yang holds a MPA degree from KSG, Harvard, and was also a Hefner Awardee at Harvard's Center for Business and Government 2005/2006, where she conducted research on media and politics and the changing role of Chinese media.

COMMENTS: "I feel fantastic to be a Hefner fellow since it has provided a lot of prospects for the study of China-related programs and I am fortunate to be able to benefit from MeiLi and Robert Hefner's generous gift. This opportunity has immersed me in a sea of academia with some of the most intelligent people of the world; opened my eyes to the real diversity of the globe; broadened my horizons and enabled me to give deeper consideration to the relationship between China and other countries. The valuable award given to me by the Hefner China Fund is an important bridge at this crossing in my life that will benefit all my future career and life successes!"
